Dr. Jay W. Morrison Writes the Republic an Interesting Letter from Berlin.

Vorage-Strange Sights and Scenes in the German Rural Districts -Notes and Incidents.

The following bright letter from Dr. Jay W. Morrison, now in Berlin, will be read with interest:

the day. But in spite of this I am writing. We left New York Saturday, October 15,

As I was alone in New York I had ex-pected no one to "see me off," but a few minutes before we left Mr. Charles S. Kay came aboard, and tegether we examined the ship that was to be my home for ten or twelve days, and we found her a veritable "floating palace" indeed, handrome's equipped and furnished with a degree of elegance and comfort equal to any steam-ship sailing from New York. Promptly at 2:45 the "gong" sounded and "all ashore" was shouted throughout the ship. Hand-shakings were cut short, adieus were smothered in kises and tears.

adieus were smothered in kises and tears. I saw great strong men, whose voices quivered and whose eyes filled with tears, as they said good-bye to loved ones to be absent for months or perhaps forever.

At our first dinner, (which was called at 5 o'clock), we were presented with a list of first-cabin passengers. I spent much of the first day or two in inspecting this and making guesses as to the names of the passening guesses as to the names of the passen-gers. Soon, however, the reserve that we oll brought with us, began to wear away. Cards were exchanged and the business of making acquaintances was commenced.

I found the names of but fifty people on the list. But then October is not the month parties: that Americans choose to cross the ocean for pleasure. And so I find that our pas-

I see as many women working in the fields as men, and they seem to do all kinds of farm work, from handling a spade to driving a team of cows. In America cows are milked in the morning and then they leaf around all day; but in Germany the cows do most of the farm work as well as furnish milk.

The farm-tools here are much inferior to those found in America. The plow is the same old unwieldy thing, with an immense entire absence of pleasure wagons among German farmers, and you see scarcely anyone driving for pleasure in the rural dis-tricts. When a farmer comes to town

Hamburg is much more like an American city than any I have seen in Germany, and is one of the leading com-mercial cities of Europe. In the cen-ter of the city there is a large water park or lake, called the Alster. This is well supplied with steam launches which make regular trips from one port to another. On the shore of this beautiful lake are to be found the fine residences of Hamburg.

From Hamburg I came on to Berlin, the capital of Prussia, residence of the emperior of Germany and seat of the imperial government; and last but not least the home of the Hon. George H. Pendleton.

Berlin is one of the most interesting cities of Europe, and is filled with castles, palaces and statues, all of historical interest. But my time has been so taken up with hospital and chemical work that I have not visited much outside of the university. If ind the opportunities for practical work in all branches of medicine are first class, and I find not a few American physicians and at James and students attending the university, two thousand of which belong to the medical department.

Duelling among the students here is carried on to a frightful degree, and if a student has not two or three long sword cuts across his complexion, he is looked upon as a coward. I am told, however, that they are very careful that nothing but the face shall be injured. The emperor was quite ill last week and the crowds that gathered in front of h's palace to see him were disappointed, but Sunday noon he was at his study window looking as well as usual.

News has been received here today that the inalady of the crown prince is believed by his physicians to be of a cancerous nature and the deepest sorrow and grief are feit here for him. J. W. M.
